

Internship Certificate

Bai Zehui, student from Tianjin University, School of Chemical Engineering and Technology in the speciality of Biological Engineering, started his internship on 25.06.2016 and ended on 15.09.2016.

During the internship, the student engaged in medical consultation work, including explaining the principle of using medical devices, biochemical knowledge in medical products, promotion of biological products and human nutrition and health consultation.

During the student's internship, he put much effort into his work and study. He had been proficient at thinking and solving problems and applying the methods to working out those alike. This student never hesitated asking senior co-workers when difficulties are met. The student also does well in putting academic theories into practice, guaranteeing the quality and quantity of the work done. At the same time, the student adheres to the company's rules. Respecting and getting along with others well, co-workers have all given their approval to the student who now leaves an excellent impression to the company.

Now the student in my company has already concluded, this is to certify that.
